Approaching the Finish.

The work of laying the electric street car tracks across the Main street stone bridge was begun yesterday morning and by last evening had made good progress. After this is completed all that remains to complete the bridge entirely ready for use is to pave the roadway. This ought to be done by the last of next week, at farthest.

Down to Glendale.

The excursion to Glendale last evening was even more pleasant and successful than that a couple of weeks ago. Over 100 persons went down, Mr. William Erskine, trustee of the property, being in charge, and all the members of the party were delighted with the beautiful place. When the lot sale comes off, in a few weeks, it will no doubt be a rousing success, as to see Glendale is to want a lot there.

Peculiar End of a Run off.

Yesterday a team hitched to a sand wagon ran off on Twelfth street near Byron, and running up on the sidewalk, one of them got down in the deep opening between the Baptist church and the retaining wall, while the other ran up on the wall. The result must have been a serious accident but that the lower horse got so wedged in that neither could move, and the team was extricated without damage.

THE O. W. L. CLUB

Gives a Pleasing Parade and an Enjoyable Outing at the Park.

Yesterday was the day for the O. W. L.'s outing, of which so much has been heard. It proved a pretty day for it, although clouds seemed to promise rain and kept down the attendance somewhat in the afternoon. The largest crowd was out last evening, when the Park was well filled, and all had an enjoyable time.

A number of places were decorated in honor of the event, something rarely seen as a compliment to a single organization of a social character. The club rooms, on Market street, had been profusely and tastefully decorated the night before, but yesterday morning's storm made the flags and bunting less attractive.

The programme opened with a parade at 1 o'clock p. m. The members, with a number of distinguished guests, one or two newspaper men and a few friends rode in open landaus, rally decorated, and headed by the Opera House band, playing its best, up Market street to Tenth, on Tenth to Main, on Main south to Twenty-sixth, to Chapline, to Twentieth, to Market, north to Sixteenth and on Sixteenth to the Elm Grove station, where the cars were taken for the Park, a special train, taking the boys through without stop ahead of the 3 o'clock motor.

There were about a dozen hacks in line, and the members all wore white yachting caps, boutonnières and very pretty badges of white, orange and blue. They made the noblest appearance of any turnout seen here for a long time. All along the streets big crowds greeted them, the procession bringing more people together on the sidewalks along the line of march than a much larger one usually does. Nearly all the members received beautiful bouquets from friends on the route, and one given to Jack Crogan by Sixth ward friends made quite a sensation.

The decorations at Humes' billiard rooms were notable. An owl swung in each window and several were hung out on perches. M. Lally had an owl and other appropriate insignia frozen in the center of cakes of artificial ice.

At the Park no objectionable person was allowed by the committee to be admitted, and it was a very congenial and tony assemblage that sat on the Mound and listened to the band, danced in the pavilion or promenade in the beautiful avenues.

Each motor added to the numbers of the throng, and the festivities were kept up until nearly midnight last night, special motors bringing the guests back to town.
